THANKS, JAPAN.
GOLD, GOING OUT.
COLD FEET, HIGH UP.
PULLMAN BERTH FOR 2.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Draw in your breath in Oriental fashion and thank Japan with a deep bow. Her statesmen do not want us meddling with her affairs, and they demand that the League of Nations cancel our invitation to help in the row between China and Japan. Be grateful to the Japanese for doing for us what our own government does not do. But do not be sure that we shall keep out even with Japan's none too complimentary assistance. We have man, we have money; Europe likes to use them.

Trouble in China and Japan begins as usual. Japan discovers that it is necessary to take "protective measures" and send in protective forces. Japan is worried about the possibility of danger to a small Japanese military outpost. Such little things are kindling wood for a great fire.

The Federal Reserve bank reports constant withdrawals from our gold supply. For instance, France took $42,146,000 more of our gold, requesting that a large part be sent in American $20 gold pieces. The French like to collect them.

Nearly a thousand million dollars in gold has been taken from our supply within four weeks. That should make somebody thoughtful. You will learn with interest that France has balanced her budget "without resorting to loans, increasing taxes or drawing on the sinking fund."

Our budget is out of gear by more than a billion. England cannot balance her budget that requires four billion pounds, and cuts down the value of her pound to decrease the real amount of her debt. The French are able financiers and business people. Their head States to prove it to us, and we ought to learn something from them.

Senator Walsh of Massachusetts says the duty of business leaders is to restore prosperity and end the slump, and if business leaders don't do it the law makers do. Just what the law makers do. Unfortunately, you can't make prosperity by law any more than you can make total abstinence by law.

Mr. Hyde, secretary of agriculture, talks plainly on the radio: "The stock market lies. It does not tell the country's real condition." That's true. It tells how high finance is swelling out at any price the tens and millions of millions of shares of stock that it printed when fools were buying them.

Mr. Hyde also says "cold feet in high places" cause trouble, also a fact. The heart knoweth his own bitterness, those in high places know what fearful "junk" they unloaded on the public during the boom. No wonder their feet are cold. They would be frozen if this were not as Lord Northcliffe used to say, "a very docile people."

The Pullman company, compelled to cut dividends yesterday for lack of earnings, requests permission to make a small extra charge of 20 per cent when two sleep in one berth. The demand is reasonable. Hotels charge more for two in a room. When George M. Pullman sold berths in his first car running

Convict Widow, 68, In Brother's Death

BOWLING GREEN, O., Oct. 16.—A 68-year-old widow has been convicted of murdering her aged brother despite her plea that she shot him in her sleep.

A jury last night found Mrs. Blanche Halsey guilty of second-degree murder in the death of her bachelor brother, Fred Bonham, 64, who was found dead in his bed Sept. 4.

Witnesses testified Mrs. Halsey was a somnambulist and the question of whether one could subconsciously premeditate and carry out a killing kept the jurors puzzled for six hours and a half before they returned their verdict.

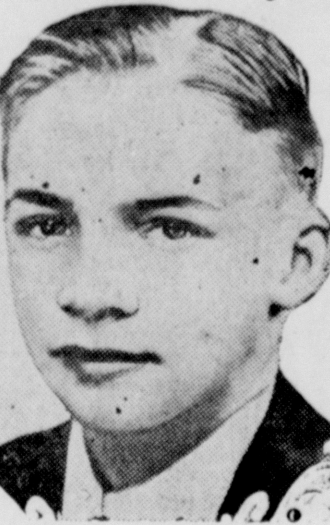

The state charged that Mrs. Halsey was fully awake when she shot her brother, with whom she lived, and that she wanted to get rid of him because she was tired of caring for him in an illness.

"Adopts" Mayor

Gene Victor McGeorge (above), 14, is the self-made hero of a drama which has staid Philadelphia gasping for this son of a miner of Montrose, Pa., has arrived at his unique goal of "adopting" the Mayor of the Quaker City, Harry Mackey. With the observation that, "Every house needs a feller, don't they?" Gene made himself at home as the foster son of H. Mackey. And Mayor Mackey, impressed by his new "son," has taken him under his wing.

BANKS ACT TO INSURE SAFETY OF DEPOSITORS

Financial Stability Is Goal of Withdrawal Schedule

Conforming with a county-wide movement designed to protect to the fullest extent the accounts of depositors, Salem banks today announced that a withdrawal schedule, limiting the amount of funds that can be taken from savings accounts, has been placed in effect here.

Executives of the First National and the Farmers National banks have placed the withdrawal limit at five per cent monthly, with a maximum of $50.

The set of regulations is announced as follows:
Accounts of $1,000 and over permit withdrawals of $50.
Accounts of $250 to $1,000 permit withdrawals of five per cent of the amounts each month.

The regular rates of interest will continue to be paid on all savings accounts.
The regulatory step has been taken by banks of the county, it is pointed out, to insure the financial stabilization of individual depositors.

It will be in effect only temporarily, or during the emergency period.

JURY INDICTS BISHOP CANNON

Miss Ada L. Burroughs Of Richmond Is Also Named

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., was indicted by a grand jury today for violation of the federal corrupt practices law during the 1928 presidential campaign.

Miss Ada L. Burroughs, of Richmond, was indicted with the Southern Methodist churchman for conspiracy to violate the federal statute.

Cannon was chairman of the headquarters committee anti-Smith Democrats in the 1928 campaign. Miss Burroughs was treasurer.

The indictment was based on the failure of Cannon and Miss Burroughs to report contributions of Edwin C. Jameson, New York capitalist and Republican, who gave $65,300.

The grand jury ruling was reached after a brief inquiry with few exceptions the witnesses were those who appeared in the senate campaign funds committee in investigation of the bishop's activities. Findings of the senate committee prompted the grand jury action.

Fete At Yorktown Recalls Old Days

YORKTOWN, Va., Oct. 16.—On the battlefield where Cornwallis surrendered to Washington and Lafayette 150 years ago, thousands of Americans gathered today to celebrate the sesquicentennial anniversary of the battle which made their national existence possible.

Yorktown, the tiny village of history, once more resembles an armed camp. Far beyond the celebration area stretch the tents of the army encampment while upon the bosom of the majestic York, 41 modern vessels ride at anchor.

A reminder of the fleet of Comte De Grasse which poured shot and shell into the British redoubts during the battle the old frigate Constitution was to join the fleet later in the day and remain at anchor throughout the days of the celebration.

ZEP OFF TODAY ON FINAL TEST HOP OF 48 HOURS

Airship Akron Expects to Cover 2,000 Miles; Measure Fuel

(By Associated Press)
AKRON, Oct. 16.—The U. S. S. Akron, world's largest airship, today began her longest and probably her final cruise before being turned over to the Navy. The ship took off at 6:50 a. m. Eastern Standard time, for a 48 hour endurance flight that is expected to cover 2,000 miles.

Takes Southern Course

Although no official announcement was made as to what course the Akron would follow it was reported she would be flown southward. In previous test flights the ship has floated over northeastern Ohio and Lake Erie.

The present flight will fill the schedule of 100 hours of test flights required by the government before it accepts its new $5,500,000 air Leviathan from the Goodyear Zeppelin Corporation.

It was understood the previous tests have indicated the Akron meets government specifications and the ship is expected to be delivered to the Navy at Lakehurst, N. J., station next week.

Measure Fuel Consumption

Measurement of the Akron's fuel consumption was part of today's test. The consumption will be measured for at least an hour under full power, and for at least two hours under various cruising speeds. A speed of 50 knots, approximately 58 miles an hour, will be maintained for 12 hours of the flight.

Seven Are Hit By Autos In Cleveland

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 16.—Five school children and two college girls were struck and injured by automobiles last night.

The five children, ranging from 8 to 15 years of age, were hit by an automobile driven by Mrs. Dorothy Miller, 23, who said the accident occurred as she tried to avoid another group of pupils crossing a street. Frank Lucas, 11, the most seriously injured, suffered a possible fractured skull.

Miss Frances Taber, 21, Norwalk, O., and Miss Mildred Adams, 19, Louisville, Ky., students at Flora Stone Mather college of Western Reserve university were hit as they paused to let a street car pass while crossing a street. Miss Taber suffered a possible fractured skull and Miss Adams received cuts and bruises. Police said an intoxicated driver who was arrested after he hit a street car a few moments later was identified as the man who ran down the two students.

SHEET AND TUBE PAYS DIVIDENDS

Distribution of $1,700,000 to Dissenting Shareholders Is Begun

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Oct. 16.—Officers of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company today began distributing $1,700,000 to holders of dissenting shares.

The amount, representing accrued dividends on stock dissenting to the company's proposed merger with the Bethlehem Steel corporation, was released by the directors after cancellation of the merger contract yesterday, but its distribution will be no easy matter.

In cases where ownership of the dissenting stock has not been transferred, payment of the dividends will be simple but thousands of shares have been transferred, some several times.

First the ownership of these shares will have to be ascertained and next whether the stock was transferred with or without accrued dividend rights. Officials estimated the task would require at least six months in some cases.

The $1,700,000 piled up in a special fund set aside for dissenting shares. Since the merger fight began 19 months ago, the company has declared five dividends, totaling $525 a share.

Status of the dissenting shares remains in doubt until Bethlehem exercised its opinion of cancelling the merger contract yesterday "because of changed conditions." The deal was approved by a majority of Sheet and Tube stockholders, but the minority, led by Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland financier, tied it up in litigation.

Premier Laval and Aids Sail For U. S.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 16.—Mrs. Christine Fallo, said to have separated from her wealthy husband in Alliance 13 years ago, will receive $2 a week from her daughter, Mrs. Minnie Eshelman, 49, Cleveland dressmaker.

Mrs. Eshelman agreed to contribute to the support of her mother after spending a half hour in jail yesterday. She had been sentenced to 30 days in the Warrensville workhouse and fined $26 by Municipal Judge Bradley Hull for her refusal to help support her mother.

Probation Officer Anna M. Lahiff, said Mrs. Fallo and her husband separated 13 years ago and that when Fallo died 11 years ago, he willed his $75,000 estate to three of his six children who had sided with him in the separation. Mrs. Eshelman was among the heirs, Mrs. Lahiff said.

COUNTY TO SEND DELEGATION TO HIGHWAY EVENT

Governor White to Speak As No. 7 Is Opened at Martins Ferry

Governor George White will speak Saturday at Martins Ferry at ceremonies marking the opening of the longest and most expensive highway in Ohio, Route No. 7, extending from Youngstown to near Cincinnati.

Albert P. Morris, manager of the Columbiana County Motor club, members of the club and county commissioners will attend the event.

Parade Opens Fete

A parade will open the celebration at 1 p. m. followed by ceremonies in which Governor White and members of his executive staff will participate. A banquet will be held for members of the Eastern Ohio Automobile and Commissioners association at Loydsville, Belmont county, at 6:30.

Route 7 extends for a distance of 420 miles along the Ohio river. Its construction involved the blasting away of an entire hillside five miles south of Bellaire, described by state highway officials as the greatest engineering feat ever attempted on an Ohio road project.

Pageant Is Planned

Millions of cubic feet of earth were removed on the Belmont county section of the route.

Opening of the highway through the cliffs along the bank of the Ohio river has cut off 14 miles between Bellaire and Powhatan.

Representatives from every county through which the route passes are expected to be in line Saturday here when a pageant depicting history of the Ohio river valley is presented.

TRIALS OF A PEACEMAKER

The Japanese foreign office is opposed to having a representative of the United States in the League of Nations council during discussion of the Manchurian dispute. The Japanese public, it warns, will not tolerate "America and the league working together in the Manchurian tangle, which is purely an affair between China and Japan." It is believed that the other powers represented in the council will persuade Japan to withdraw this puzzling opposition to a well-intended move.

It appears that the United States, which was making a conscientious effort to work with the League of Nations has irritated the Japanese. This is unfortunate. It is a plain example of the danger of misunderstanding that stalks diplomacy. Conciliation will be extremely difficult if, as the Japanese foreign office states, the Japanese public has misinterpreted this nation's good intentions.

However Japan chooses to view the Manchurian dispute, it is more than "purely an affair between China and Japan." The situation is packed with dynamite. Just as the situation in the Balkans was packed with dynamite in 1914. One cruel lesson has taught the world to be more cautious of so-called local affairs. This nation is well within its rights as an advocate of world peace in everything it has said.

There has been a debate for 10 years concerning what the United States would do, in case war threatened and the League of Nations intervened. The answer was given when Secretary Stimson sent a note to Gene that pledged this nation to reinforce the league's action. The league understands that the Manchurian dispute is more than a local problem; the United States agrees. There is no reason for Japan to resent the interest of the United States unless it also represents the interest of the league. If, and it is difficult to ascribe such motives to Japan, that nation was showing its disapproval of the United States for not being in the league by trying to "freeze out" the American representative at the council, the incident can be ignored cheerfully. This nation's position is sound.

LABOR'S UNCERTAINTY.

The American federation of labor is opposed to establishment of compulsory unemployment insurance in the United States. Its leaders guided delegates to the convention at Vancouver, B. C., towards that decision with eyes straight ahead and ears closed to protests from those who had been instructed to favor unemployment insurance.

This looks like inconsistency. Unemployment insurance has been included in every plan to cushion the shock of future depressions. It is not to aid in the avoidance of future depressions labor has demanded it as vociferously as theorists have demanded it. Yet, the most powerful labor organization is opposed to it.

It submits a broad nine-point program instead. It asks that wages be maintained, hours shortened and additional workers employed. It asks that workers with dependents be given preference and that young workers be ruled out. It asks that public construction be pushed, that financial relief be given from private and public funds, that minimum work forces be retained, and that employment agencies be strengthened. It suggests, in short, a program of palliative measures, without any thought of giving consideration to a scheme that, it is claimed, would strengthen the position of labor permanently. The president of the federation, William Green, placates delegates by promising to go before congress to plead for an unlimited dole, if necessary. But in the same breath he warns that any attempt to obtain unemployment insurance would be disastrous and would extract too high a price from labor.

The American federation of labor, for apparent reasons, cannot afford to recommend any plan which might make an outside force more powerful than itself. If it were possible to do what never has been done in any country—establish a practical system of unemployment insurance in the United States—the federation would be placed in competition with a force that would have more benefits to offer workmen than it could offer itself. It is important that the federation is not opposed to the principle of unemployment insurance by word or deed; it is opposed only to its "establishment." Guiding officials of labor organizations never will look favorably upon what might turn out to be a popular remedy until they find some way to get control of it.

What Others Say

CONCEIT AND BAD DRIVING
Conceit is no crime, but it may have criminal consequences if a too complacent person takes the wheel of an automobile. This is the conclusion of Dr. Paul Schroeder, a state criminologist of Illinois. At a recent meeting of the Mid-West Safety congress he asserted that conceited persons make bad automobile drivers, often acquiring records as "repeaters" in motor accidents.

His theory is that consideration for the rights of others on the highway is a more important factor in safe driving than keen intelligence. A kindly person is apt to be a safer driver than a puffed-up individual who goes his own self-centered way, letting others look out for themselves.

A study of drivers who have landed in the Illinois state penitentiary on manslaughter charges revealed that most of them were not "handicapped mentally by low intelligence or physically by being crippled." Their prevailing defect was a tendency to be conceited and disregard the rights of others.

The commissioner of motor vehicles in Connecticut has already introduced a questionnaire for applicants for licenses, designed to show their character, intelligence and judgment. Perhaps he will now add questions to indicate whether or not they are conceited.

The day may come when an "only child" or the "baby of a family" may be unable to secure a driver's license until he has brought character witnesses to testify that he is modest, unselfish and duly considerate of others—New York Times.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Thoughts while strolling: I'm always mixing up Arthur Train and Arthur Stringer. Anyway one of the other married Jobyna Howland. And she is a grand comedienne. What happened to the old expression: "As good as wheat?" Katherine Brush is a striking image of a famous Italian princess.

Damen Runyon, a Pueblo, Colo. boy, who made good in the city. Taxis with silvered tops and plaid bodies. Young Rockefeller sauntering up the avenue. He doesn't seem depressed by his "paper losses." That show-off debutante with the Mae West slouch. And the depression is putting a crimp in debutanting. Goody!

All the Beauty Salons are named for Hollywood. It used to be Paris. Wonder why they don't make a full length Mickey Mouse? That little haberdashery on 49th at that heraldic "Big Re-Organization Sale." I'd like to see Menomonee. Kendall and Lee O'well in an eyebrow-matching contest.

George Buckley stepping high after three years strapped to a plank in a hospital. On Broadway they call playing a practical joke "giving him the business." George Gershwin and his Dad. Pals. Their comradeship recalls the late Don Allen and his father. They worked, played and traveled together.

On a street in Chicago one day the father stopped suddenly, gasped: "So long, son," and fell lifeless. And in a short while Don was a suicide in Boston. Dudley Field Malone could double for Winston Churchill. Something restful about church steps in twilight. I always want to sit there.

Frank Sullivan is taking on another chin. What became of Magistrate Jean Norris? They report a high yellow gal has an apartment in one of the smartest hotels. A lull in "love nest" shootings. And tooth paste people haven't discovered a new disease to cure lately.

James Gerard has the shortest neck in town. John Charles Thomas has smallest ears. Elsie Bartlett wood the longest legs. Young Will Hearst needs a haircut. Dusk in a public square. The clutch of lovers' hands. And a blaze in their eyes.

I wonder what others do in those moments of acute embarrassment resulting from stupid blunders. While trying in a sudden shower while evening to hail a taxi an auto passed. I thought I recognized in it a gentleman I knew and when he stopped at my signal, opened the door and plopped in the seat beside him. As the car started I recognized the mistake. He was a total stranger but generously carried me home. In thanking him I said: "It was lucky I found you before someone else, but I'm mighty grateful just the same." And any bright scholar making sense out of that one is entitled to a crock of braided spinach.

But top honors for excited confusion still goes to the man in our town who shrieked to the owner of a barking dog: "Call off your dog or I'll knock off his head off."

There is something near grand literature in this penciled postcard from one signing himself "A Bowery Lodging House Guest": "My heart, utterly drained of courage, loosed, fluttered between the warmth of life and the cold terror of death this evening. In a movie whither I crept, because it offers nearest to the disillusionment of a booze I cannot afford, a young girl sat in an adjoining seat. She was the type, as proud and swift as a mustang's colt, of which any father might be proud. In what looked to her as a fumble in the darkness for the arm of the seat my hand closed over hers and I departed. She was my daughter. Four years ago I was her hero. And the old story—market, gambling, drink, a Bowery flop and oblivion.

The late T. A. Dorgan (Tad) was an established artist when an accident in San Francisco deprived him most of his fingers of his drawing hand. Tad learned to draw all over again with his left hand and reached even greater heights. Intimate of J. T. Webster, the cartoonist, have recently learned that due to a nerve trouble in the right arm his days at the drawing board were numbered. He like Tad, mastered his art with his left hand, and for five years has not used his right in drawing. And doing his very best work with the change.

Such achievements are encouraging to those of us who—set typewriters slouched on one hip. Some day we may sit up straight like men.

The Stars Say —

For Saturday, October 17

The stellar mutations holding force on this day may have a tendency to complicate and disturb conditions in a most unexpected and unforeseen manner. There may be tenacious obstacles to affairs, with delays and disappointments, but methods of diplomacy, even intrigue and secret understandings, may have the effect of counterbalancing the most adverse situations. Deal with large corporations.

Those whose birthday it is may have a peculiar year to cope with, one in which irregular, secret, shrewd and clever methods may be necessary to frustrate or parry unforeseen opposition or furtive hostility. Tact may win rather than aggression. A child born on this day may gain its greatest successes through diplomacy, tact or intrigue, rather than through open covenant openly arrived at. It may be restless, nervous and morose, and should be properly trained. Notable nativity: Thomas Fortune Ryan, financier.

A Skin Ailment
Erysipelas is a skin condition which was first described in 1884. This disease is due to an infection caused by a bacillus, or germ, found in swine.

For many years it was believed the condition was caused alone from contact with these animals. Certainly it is conveyed by some animal, and swine are more frequently infected than others. It is known now that many healthy swine may carry the disease without themselves being infected. The germ has been found in other animals, particularly in diseased cattle, sheep, birds and fish. The infection in man is rarely severe. It is the mild form of the infection that was originally described by Rosenbach in 1884. It is not as rare a disease as it was formerly believed to be. It occurs among commercial fishermen, particularly during hot weather. Their infection comes from contact with fish. When erysipelas involves the skin, it is likely to have followed an injury to the hand.

The infection has been reported as a result of contact with rabbits. It has been observed after handling recently thawed fish in the zoological gardens. It may come from the sting of the jellyfish. It has been known to occur from the handling of dogs.

The disease is an important one because it is a hazard of a great industry. Although it is not a vital disease, it often incapacitates the infected person for many weeks. It is an ailment that requires great care and treatment.

This condition is, of course, preventable. All individuals who are exposed to any one of the possible methods of infection should be particularly careful of every abrasion or injury of the hands.

At present much work is being done on the possibility of developing a protective vaccine. It is hoped that with the completion of this study, the disease may disappear.

Answers to Health Queries

D. L. Q.—My eyesight is getting weak and if I read without my glasses my eyes feel tired and strained. I am wearing cheap glasses. Would they be apt to injure my eyes in any way?

A.—I also have difficulty in remembering—can anything be done to correct this condition?

A.—Have your eyes examined by an eye specialist and he will advise proper glasses. You are probably straining your eyes because your glasses are not suitable.

2.—This may be due to several causes: Old age, lack of concentration, poor health are among the usual causes. Without knowing more about your case it would be difficult to advise treatment.

Answers to Health Queries
C. M. E. Q.—How can I reduce the ankles? Exercises do not help.

A.—It is difficult to reduce weight in any part of the body without reducing in general.

J. E. L. Q.—Is the practice of squeezing a lemon in a glass of warm water before breakfast each morning beneficial?

A.—May help to clear the intestinal tract.

M. M. M. Q.—How long will it take to develop symptoms which require operation when the appendix is involved?

A.—This depends upon the underlying conditions—and whether or not the disturbance has become chronic or due to an acute attack. Your doctor should advise you along these lines.

AVERAGE SPAN TO BE 70 YEARS

New Type of Medicine Looms, Declares Dr. Charles Mayo

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Prediction that man's average life is about to be increased to seventy years, due to a "new type of medicine," was made at the American college of surgeons meeting today by Dr. Charles H. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., one of the foremost medical authorities.

"This new phase of healing is a combination of medical care with the aid of the individual efforts and intelligence of the patient," Dr. Mayo made these statements in a general review with the press.

From 58 to 70
"The average expectation of life now is 58 years," he said. "Within 25 years it is my belief that this expectation should be advanced to 70 years."

"The added span will come about through education, teaching people that they must care for themselves and how to do it. An important period for this added care will be between the ages of 30 and 50, and another will be our health development with youth. As an illustration the surgeon dies at about 58 because of the strain of his work. The medical man dies at about 68, gaining 10 years because he is free from the intense stress of constant surgical work."

Sees Another Type
"We are on the edge of another type of medicine. This new development is developing in the enormously increased care of the sick that is being taken by groups of physicians in the cities, aided by charity work. This type of work is enormously advancing the care of the sick."

Dr. Mayo said that "state medicine is slipping under the doctor's feet before he knows it, and there is danger of socialized medicine, which would be a detriment to the physician and the public."

SOUTH HADLEY, Mass.—Albert F. Wilkinson says a pullet at his poultry farm laid an egg nine inches long, seven and one-half inches in diameter, and five and one-half ounces in weight.

RENO — Pasture conditions in this state are looking up now following recent light rains. George V. Seager, meteorologist of the United States weather bureau reports.

RAYVILLE, La. — Cotton was used as legal tender to gain admission to the Richland Parish fair here.

BERLIN — Americans visiting Berlin in August totaled 5,784, out of a total of 25,224 foreign visitors. English numbered 2,698.

Colonel Goodbody's Coffee Making Tips

A few cardinal points to remember—coffee should be freshly roasted and ground, the contact with the water should be brief, and the temperature should be kept below the boiling point. For the coffee pot method, use coarsely ground coffee, for the percolator, medium ground and for the drip method, a fine ground coffee gives the best results.

AS STOCKS DROP

Losses of Point Registered
By Several Leading Issues

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—The stock market fluctuated narrowly today. The list was irregularly higher at the start but then eased.
Losses of about a point were registered by American Telephone, American Can, Case, Dupont and New York Central, while U. S. Steel and General Electric sagged fractionally. National Biscuit and Southern Pacific were firm. Rising about a point.
Wall street viewed as constructive the increase in the Federal Reserve bank rediscount rate to 3 1/2 per cent. The New York clearing house committee immediately increased the maximum rates paid on deposits by half of one per cent.

What's a Pinch, More or Less?

Edith Berkman, "Red Flame" Communist leader, apparently is as care-free as a new-born babe in her commonplace surroundings between two burly bluecoats. This is only her second arrest in a week in Lawrence, Mass., so what's a pinch, more or less? Edith is shown being escorted to jail after she made an attempt to exhort striking textile mill operatives in Lawrence. Efforts are to be made to snuff out the "Red Flame" by deportation.

from Chicago to Springfield, each berth was sold to two as a matter of course, and each one paid his half.
You know the story about the indignant passenger who said to Pullman, "I can't sleep with that long legged man in the berth, his knees are in my back." The long legged one was Abraham Lincoln.
The Pullman company should get its extra charge for two in a berth.
Thomas A. Edison's end is near. He has lain in a stupor for two days and for several days has been unable to drink water or other fluid, he has eaten nothing for 10 days.
The task of leaving this life in which he has worked so hard will soon be over. And his name will live when the so-called "great" of his day shall be for be forgotten.
As France gathers in the gold of the world, by tens hundreds thousands of millions Le Matin of Paris says without a smile: Gold comes to France because "holders of capital wish to transfer their holdings to a peaceful country, while converting their wealth into money of proved stability."
Premier Bennett of Canada, says the worst of the world's troubles are over. "Some nation must start a recovery, why not Canada?"
The recovery ought to be started by the nation, and it will be before long it would have started some time ago, except that financial institutions had first to shed their burden of worthless stocks, while sacrificing good properties, for the sake of the magic word "liquidity."
When our "cold feet in high places" get warmer a little, you will see a change.

The TRUTH ABOUT BRAN

WITH so many opinions about bran, it is well to know the facts. Here are the results of laboratory tests with bran:

Bran is a good source of Vitamin B. This vitamin helps tone up the intestines and keep them regular.

Bran also supplies "bulk" which further aids intestinal action. The "bulk" in bran is much like the "bulk" you eat in lettuce or other leafy vegetables.

This "bulk" absorbs moisture—like a soft sponge—and gently cleanses the intestines of wastes. Bran also brings the body needed iron for the blood.

A pleasant, safe bran cereal is Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Millions of people have used it with satisfactory results over a period of ten years.

Two tablespoonfuls daily of this delicious ready-to-eat cereal are usually sufficient to prevent and relieve both temporary and recurring constipation. If you suffer from intestinal trouble not relieved this way, consult your doctor.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has a wonderful nut-sweet flavor. Enjoy with milk or cream, or use in cooking. Sold by grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

THEATER Attractions

"THE PHANTOM OF PARIS" is at the State today. It stars John Gilbert. This picture is unusual, not only in its novel plot, but in the settings, scenes and equipment used in the taking of the picture. Many of the parts taken are of a new type to the actors and actresses, especially that of John Gilbert, who starts off in the true Gilbert manner, shifts to duplicate the part of another and again shifts back to his real self.

Another new note in the picture is the playing of a detective by Lewis Stone. A veteran of the stage and screen, Stone has never before played the part of a detective.

The story itself is a far cry from the ordinary. In every scene there is change from the productions of the American screen. There is murder, but murder of unusual circumstances causing novel consequences. The cast of "The Phantom of Paris" includes Leila Hyams, Jean Hersholt, C. Aubrey Smith, Natalie Moorhead and Ian Keith.

"SIDEWALKS OF NEW YORK" with Buster Keaton as its star is today's attraction at the Grand.

Comical troubles galore follow Buster, who plays a millionaire's son trying to reform the small boys of a tenement district. He falls in love in the process—also into the disfavor of gangsters, and trials and tribulations galore dog his path.

He goes through varied troubles running a gymnasium and gets all bent up in a wrestling match. A boxing contest, next mope him up some more, and a hilarious chase with gangsters figures in the whirlwind climax. Anita Page is the heroine.

Slice Of France Price Of Victory Had Germany Won

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16. — Germany's price for peace two months before America entered the World War was revealed today by the state department as "a slice of France" and general allied indemnities.

The information was contained in a hitherto unpublished cablegram from Ambassador James W. Gerard on February 4, 1917, to President Wilson. It was part of a 708-page compilation of official correspondence made public by the state department.

"Even if there is war," it said, "German military calculated they can starve England before America can do anything. These people have only one god—force."

"If you decide to make any threats," Gerard advised the president, "threaten war. Germans not afraid of break of diplomatic relations which simply means they can go ahead and do what they please and attack us if they win."

Speaks of Hatred
The German chancellor, he reported, had spoken to him of "the great hatred the military and naval people have for America."

The German terms for peace at that time, Gerard informed his chief, were:

"Germany to give up Belgium but retaining so-called guarantees such as railroads, forts, a garrison, ports, commercial control," etc.; a slice of France through rectification of frontiers; will only give back a small part of Serbia, and Bulgaria can do as she likes with Roumania and everybody must pay indemnities to Germany, etc."

The untold story of an attempt by President Wilson to induce Austria-Hungary to make peace shortly before the United States entered the war, also was disclosed.

Secret messages also showed President Wilson offering inducement to Austria-Hungary to forsake the German cause. He pledged that a previous expressed intention of the allies to disrupt the empire state by separating Hungary and Bohemia from Austria would not be carried out.

Tried To Bring Peace
The effort formed a part of the general attempt made by the American government in December 1918, and the early months of 1917 to bring peace before being forced into the war.

It failed when the Austro-Hungarian government refused to dis-associate itself from Germany in negotiate in negotiations for peace or in the conduct of submarine warfare.

The state department's disclosures marked the second time this week it has opened to the public records that have been secreted in its archives for more than a decade.

Another lengthy compilation showed the efforts of the American government to keep Russia in the war on the side of the allies through a campaign of propaganda and financial support.

Record-Breaking Crowd To See Quakers Battle East Liverpool

THE DAY In Sports

IMPORTANT GRID CLASHES
BUCKEYES MEET MICHIGAN
PICKING THE WINNERS

AN ATTRACTIVE MENU of football entertainment engages the attention of America's grid fanatics Saturday as the 1931 season gets under way in real earnest. Topped by such scholastic conflicts as the Salem-East Liverpool, Youngstown South-Warren, Alliance and Canton and college games involving Notre Dame-Drake, Ohio State-Michigan, Yale-Chicago, and others of equal importance, the schedule is one of the most attractive arranged to-date.

More than 5,000 fans are expected to witness the renewal of relations between Salem and Liverpool tonight while a throng numbering 12 times that total is anticipated when Sam Willaman's Buckeyes battle the Michigan Wolverines at Michigan. It will be the opening Big Ten conference engagement for Willaman's cohorts and fans here are strong in their hopes that the Scarlet and Gray is victorious.

Few Saturdays all season will be jotted with such an array of curricular conflicts as tomorrow brings Army battles Harvard at West Point, Columbia and Dartmouth clash at New York City, Cornell meets Princeton and Syracuse plays Florida in the East's major game. Yale invades Chicago, Wisconsin plays Purdue in another Big Ten game, Iowa and Indiana clash and Huntley Anderson's new Notre Dame product opposes Drake in the leaders in the central states district.

Out west Southern California plays Oregon, Stanford clashes with Oregon State, Washington State meets California, Texas vs. Oklahoma, Baylor vs. Arkansas and Rice vs. Southern Methodist head the southwest's program while in the south Tennessee-Alabama and Tulane-Vanderbilt mixups are the chief sources of interest.

IT'S ONLY NATURAL that Salem fans, first of all, are interested in the outcome of the Quakers' game at the Ceramic City. It will be a hard-fought affair but the Red and Black should return home with its third straight triumph. On paper the Salem lads look two touchdowns better than the southern countians.

Canton McKinley looked like a mediocre aggregation in losing to Youngstown Rayen last week, 20-7, and will in all probability drop another verdict tomorrow. Alliance is hoped to defeat the McKinley eleven.

Here's the way results of other games are hoped:

High school—Sharon, Pa., to beat Rayen; Youngstown South to beat Warren; Girard to defeat Campbell Memorial; East Palestine over Lisbon; Niles over Wellsville; Leontonia to beat Salineville and Columbiana to trounce Canfield.

College—(first-named picked to win)—Army-Harvard; Cornell-Princeton; Dartmouth-Columbia; Fordham-Holy Cross; Villanova-Boston College; Notre Dame-Drake; Alabama-Tennessee; Temple-Bucknell; Syracuse-Florida; Ohio State-Michigan.

Over-Confidence Seen As Handicap to Salem High in Crucial Game

One of the largest throngs ever assembled at a Columbiana county football classic is anticipated when two of the county's oldest rivals, Salem and East Liverpool, renew gridiron relations in a clash at Patterson field, East Liverpool, tonight.

A new record for attendance at a county game may be established at the game. A crowd of more than 5,000 is expected. The kick-off will be at 8 o'clock with John Patton, Steubenville, referee; E. D. Gross, New Philadelphia as umpire and Clarence Todd, New Galilee, Pa., head linesman.

Over-Confidence Feared

Fearing his gridirers are taking their traditional county foe's gridiron abilities too lightly, Coach Floyd Stone is fighting to eliminate a wave of over-confidence that appeared prevalent among players during closing practice sessions Thursday. Every effort has been made to point the Stonemen for a gruelling struggle, possibly one of the most hard fought in the history of relations between the two schools.

This over-confidence, born as a result of Salem's 13-7 victory over Warren last week, is seen by Stone as his team's biggest handicap in the combat with the Potters. New information, offensive plays that will be introduced for the first time will be seen as the Quakers seek their third consecutive victory of the season.

Coach Leland Schachern's combine is confident of victory also, but its confidence is not of the exaggerated proportions as that of the Red and Black gridiron brigade. A hard fight is anticipated and the Potters have spent a week in preparing for it.

Large Crowd Expected

More than 500 Salem fans will make the trip to Patterson field for the classic the first grid game played between the two schools since 1928. In sixteen previous encounters, played over a period of 24 years, Salem had won nine games, lost six and tied once. Salem's fans face an attractive weekend grid calendar with the backing of two contests for Reilly athletic stadium Saturday afternoon. The Sheen Bulldogs face Youngstown at 1:30 while at 2:30 the Salem reserves clash with Girard High second-stringers.

OHIO'S GRID SCHEDULE

Seven Games Listed On Buckeye Gridirons Today; Mount Union To Play Kent State Eleven

Seven games today and tonight give Ohio's week-end football campaign a flying start. Six out of state teams will lead an invasion into the Buckeye State and two out of the most formidable will be in action at Dayton and Cleveland.

The University of Dayton flyers will attempt to hold their fort against West Virginia, which brings one of its strongest eleven in years into the state.

Carroll Meets Mercer
At Cleveland, John Carroll will make a stake in the southern intercollegiate association championship. The camp is regarded as the toughest of John Carroll's schedule and will find the blue streaks outweighed 30 pounds to the man on the line and 20 pounds in the backfield.

Bethany college of West Virginia will be another invader, tackling Muskingum. Two Kentucky schools, Transylvania and Centre, will come north to meet Wittenberg and Xavier, respectively. Bowling Green, unbeaten in three starts will be host to Detroit City college while Mt. Union expects an easy time with Kent State.

The seventh game, involving the northwest conference standings, finds Findlay pitted against Bluffton this afternoon at Findlay. All of the other games will be night affairs.

CHICAGO MAY UPSET DOPE, DEFEAT YALE GRIDDERS SATURDAY

Michigan, Ohio Ready for Clash; Iowa Prospects Look Brighter

By WILLIAM WEEKES
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—There is a lurking suspicion on Chicago's mid-way that Amos Alonzo Stagg is about due for another upset victory and that Yale will be the victim Saturday.

Look For Surprise

Stagg's first surprise triumph was accomplished in 1905 when his Maroons defeated Michigan's great eleven, 2 to 0. More recently, he came up with the famous 21-21 tie with the Illinois in 1924, and his last was a 15 to 8 victory over Princeton in 1929. He followed up with a 26 to 7 dazzer over the University of Washington, the same season, but failed to connect last year.

So, they believe on the Chicago campus that Yale is making its first trip into the middle west just to take another beating.

For the occasion, the "old man" has wrought a new offense, in which Yale's tackles probably will get a good workout and passes will be used frequently. He has had every member of his backfield squad on both ends of the aerial game, and with considerable success.

The Yale squad squad was due in a drill on Stagg field. The Maroons Chicago this afternoon in time for will use a nearby practice field.

Purdue Battles Wisconsin

Plenty of footballs will be in the air at Madison, Wis., if Purdue and Wisconsin do as expected. Both eleven have been heaving the ball all week, and unless the weather prevents, an air battle is almost certain.

Michigan and Ohio are ready for their struggle to remain in the Big Ten championship race. The Wolverines will spare nothing against the Buckeyes, as the rest of their schedule does not appear tough. Ohio has had considerable hard luck through injuries, but will have its best eleven since 1926 on the field at Ann Arbor.

Iowa's prospects were brightened yesterday when Randall Hickman, regular quarterback, returned to practice and demonstrated he will be in there throwing passes against Indiana. The Indiana squad left last night for Iowa City, at full strength for the first time of the season. Northwestern continues to think more about the Ohio State game a week from Saturday, than of the California (Southern branch) game this week, and Notre Dame is planning on taking Drake in stride.

Minnesota will be idle this week, but is winding up for Iowa game a week hence.

MIDGETS CLASH HERE SATURDAY

Stay-at-home Salem football fans will be attracted to Reilly athletic stadium Saturday for two grid contests involving Quaker City aggregations. The Sheen Bulldogs battle Youngstown and the Salem reserves clash with Girard.

The first game, between the Bulldogs and Youngstown, at Ohio Bantamweight league struggle, is scheduled at 1:30. Here's the way the teams will line up:

ARMY WILL BATTLE
NAVY ON DEC. 12

Elimination Tourney To Involve Eastern Grid
Teams at New York

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Football's
proposed helping hand to the unemployed had developed into a nation-wide movement today with volunteers from virtually every section of the country.

Program Develops Rapidly
The program developed most rapidly in the east where three games or tournaments already have been definitely booked and others are in the making. Army and Navy will play in the Yankee stadium here
Dec. 12 for charity's sake; Yale,
Brown, Dartmouth and Holy Cross
will compete in an elimination tournament at New Haven, Dec. 5,
while Princeton, Pennsylvania, Columbia and Cornell will be competitors in a similar tournament in the Yankee stadium, Dec. 9.

That, for the time being, is the eastern program but a number of schools have made known their willingness to participate.

Southern Teams Volunteer
In the south, Tennessee's volunteers have lived up to their name by indicating their willingness to play for the fund. Mississippi A.
and M. also announced it would be available and others probably will follow.

The Big Ten conference still has
the subject under consideration although that powerful group already has amended its by-laws to permit
extension of the season from Nov.
21 to Nov. 28 for intra-conference games for charity. Dayton, Ohio, is another volunteer from the mid-west. The Big Six members,
Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas, Kap-
sas State, Oklahoma and Iowa State, are known to be in favor of postseason charity games but the conference, as a group, has as yet
taken no action.

In the Rocky Mountain Conference a charity game Dec. 5, at Denver, tentatively has been booked although the contestants have
not yet been selected.

LISBON, Oct. 16.—Deputy Game Warden L. W. Boring has been informed by I. S. Guthery, director of agriculture, that because of depletion of the raccoon population a five year closed season will be in effect for this game after Jan. 15.
The new order provides that raccoon can be taken only this year
from Nov. 15 to Jan. 15. Hereofore, the season closed Feb. 1. During the five year period the rac-

Townsend, hard-pressed to win over Billy ran, Polish socker, in his eastern debut last week perhaps will find Walker a handful. The New Jersey boy, a puncher who can take it, fights as though he likes it.
Originally Walker was to have fought Benny Leonard but Benny was banned from the garden by the
New York State Athletic commis-

PLAYING WITH FIRE

BY WILLIAM McLEOD RAINE

SYNOPSIS

Lee Reynolds is the owner of a ranch which drought has almost ruined. She leases a Mexican rancho and moves her starving herd there. She is barely settled when a revolution breaks out. Megares, a man of the border, is the leader. Ranse Brennan, a former foreman of Lee's, is his right hand man. Brennan was discharged by Lee and swore revenge. Lee hires a new hand, who is recognized by Dunc Daggett, an old ranch helper, as Jack Hadley, a millionaire oil man of California, whose father owned a mine near Lee's ranch and was murdered by outlaws. Hadley is searching for the murderer of his father. Hadley and Lee call on Megares, who is, apparently friendly to them. Megares calls at the ranch and is infatuated with Lee's guest, Mrs. Doris Silver. He comes to live at the rancho, to protect them, he says, though they are really his prisoners. Doris is rescued by her husband. Lee refuses to leave her ranchers—and Jack Hadley, whom she loves. Harold Silver promises to return with an armed plane for their rescue. Lee and Jack are sentenced by a drum court martial to be shot at sunset.

INSTALLMENT 27

BRENNAN INTERRUPTS
Opening the door, Megares walked in and bowed to his prisoner.
"Tell me you will save his life," she cried.
He moved forward, smiling at her. "Whose life, my dear lady? Let us not talk of others. Let us have this one hour for our own."
"You can't mean to kill Jack Hadley. You are trying to frighten me. Well, you have won. I am frightened. Now you will save him, will you not?"
The sad eyes beneath the long silken lashes pleaded with him to be pitiful.
"But I cannot save him. He was convicted by court martial. It is out of my hands. I must not interfere. All my concern is with you, mine. I am grieved that you must so soon pass out of the sunshine."
"Let me die tonight—with him—if he must die. I beg that of you with all my heart."
He was taken aback. He had come prepared to bargain with her for her life, to grant it at a price. And she preferred to die with her lover.

"You are a trifle abrupt my friend."

This was annoying, since what he had to offer was something she did not value.

"You do not want to live?" he said.

"I'm not afraid for myself. You do not mean to kill me. Before those other men would find me guilty you had to promise to pardon me. Any one could see that. But if you must have a life, take mine and spare Jack Hadley."

"So you are quite sure I mean to pardon you. Don't be so certain. I may, if you are reasonable. You shall bargain for your life, my dear."

"For his," she substituted.
"For your own. Look at the picture. On one side swift death—oblivion; on the other love and sunshine, pleasant days and ecstatic nights, all the good years ahead. What will you pay to make the latter come true?"

"It could come true only if Jack was alive. I'll give you everything I have in the world to let him go. My ranch—all my cattle—what money I have."

"Not feasible. I am wanted in your United States just as I am here. Your government would not permit me to enjoy these good things. Have you nothing else to offer—for your own life, not for his?"

"Nothing."
Irritation flashed from him. "Wake up, you fool. I give the word and you will walk out to death. Think. Worms will eat your body. I can save you—I alone."

"You can save me for long years of sorrow and grief. That is all." He put an arm around her and dragged her slender body close to his. His hot black eyes blazed into her amber ones and lit no answering fire there. She made no response. She was inert and lifeless, unmoved by his anger and his passion.

"You Puritan Yankee!" he cried. "None of you know what love is. It is hot lava in the blood. It is desire storming through the veins. It is passion crying for its own. But I will teach you. I, Manuel Megares, will change that water in your arteries to red and rushing fire. From me you will learn how a Spaniard loves."

"I will learn only how to hate you as a cruel savage animal."

"We shall see. But whether you love or hate, you shall be mine. You and that blundering fool Hadley came between me and the woman I had chosen. I swore then you should take her place. If I have to hide in the hills you shall go with me. From one gorge to another I will drag you as we are being hunted."

Into her mind a dark thought came. He had spoken of a bargain. Since she was lost anyhow why not get something out of the wreck? She offered a compromise, hating herself and him.

"I will go with you. I will pay the debt I owe. But you will give me something in exchange? You will spare my friend and let him go? If I am to be yours . . . you must be generous. You must give me this one thing I ask."

All the young life had been stricken out of her. The big eyes had lost their luster. The cheeks were pale and cold. The body in his arms was flaccid. She looked a bride fit for death. But he knew that youth is resilient. His hour would come, he told himself.

His wily brain busied itself planning deception. He could pretend to give way, could promise her Hadley's life, and even let her see the man starting for the line. Then he could have him seized and secretly killed. Why not? She would not learn for weeks how he had fooled her. By that time it would not matter.

He laughed. "You are persistent, my dear. Very well. You win. The Yankee shall live, and you shall go with me—willingly—and he shall be nothing to you and I shall be everything."

"Yes," she answered, in a small dead voice.

He kissed her eyelids and her lips, ravenously, and she stood there in his arms, a lax dead thing, and wondered how life could go on in the days to come when she would be paying forfeit.

The door opened abruptly and Brennan stood at the entrance to the room gloowering at them.

The arms of the Mexican fell away from the girl. His lids narrowed, but his words were ironically suave.

"You are a trifle abrupt, my friend, in interrupting our love-making. You will wish, perhaps, to apologize and retire."

The eyes of each man were fastened on those of the other. Not once did either relax for an instant the rigor of his steady regard.

For both knew, by that sixth sense which warns men who have faced danger often, that the quarrel between them was about to come to tragic issue. The harsh imperious temper of the big man had crashed the barriers of caution at last. He had made one stipulation with his recklessness and only one. Just outside the patio a fast horse stood saddled, tied to a post by a slip knot. That much chance he had given himself.

"No. I know you, fellow. You've always been a double-crossing wolf. What story have you been stringing her with now?"

"He's going to save Jack," Lee cried. "We've made a bargain. He's going to free him and let him go home."

"That's a lie. He's not going to do anything of the sort."

"Take care," Megares warned.

The Mexican was watching him intently, every nerve wary, every muscle alert. It would be soon now, he was thinking.

"I've watched your smoke, you crook. If you're pretending to let Hadley go, you're aiming to have him bushwhacked. Haven't I known you twenty years? The girl's to pay the price while you fool her. That's to be the way of it, eh? Well, you don't get away with it."

"I'm telling you. She's to give you her good clean body in exchange for your damned lies? No. I'll send you to hell first."

The brown fingers of the Mexican swept up to the revolver butt above the holster. Even then, in that fraction of a second before the guns blazed, Brennan knew he had let his anger trick him. Lee was standing back of Megares almost in the line of fire. The knowledge of this disturbed the aim of the big man.

While the revolvers roared Lee crowded close to the wall. She saw stabbing spurts of flame, two distorted faces wreathed in smoke, bodies tensed and crouched like those of wild beasts about to spring. She heard an oath, a gasp, the crash of a table as it went over from the impact of a staggering weight.

Ranse was on the floor, trying desperately to raise his weapon, and Megares was flinging bullets into the prone figure.

Lee screamed out a protest and ran forward. She threw herself beside the body of her former employee. He was dead before she could even lift the head.

She looked up into the twisted face looking down with such fiendish hate. At sight of it she shuddered.

Already men were pouring into the room.

"He threatened me and attacked me," Megares explained. "I call this woman to witness. Look at his gun. It has been fired two or three times. The man was a traitor. He deserved death."

"Are you wounded?" a soldier asked.

"No. I was too quick for him." The killer was recovering his surface aplomb. "The assassin drew and fired before I got my revolver out. Take out the traitor's body and bury it," Megares ordered.

Lee sank into a chair and covered her face with her hands.

The bandit chief looked down at her for a moment, smiled cruelly, then turned and walked from the room. He was going to be busy for a short time explaining what had occurred to his subordinate officers. It was just as well the official report of Brennan's death should bear the color he wished.

ARMY WILL BATTLE
NAVY ON DEC. 12

Elimination Tourney To Involve Eastern Grid
Teams at New York

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Football's
proposed helping hand to the unemployed had developed into a nation-wide movement today with
volunteers from virtually every section of the country.

Program Develops Rapidly
The program developed most rapidly in the east where three games
or tournaments already have been definitely booked and others are being made. Army and Navy will play in the Yankee stadium here
Dec. 12 for charity's sake; Yale,
Brown, Dartmouth and Holy Cross
will compete in an elimination
tournament at New Haven, Dec. 5,
while Princeton, Pennsylvania, Columbia and Cornell will be competitors in a similar tournament in the Yankee stadium, Dec. 9.

That, for the time being, is the
eastern program but a number of schools have made known their
willingness to participate.

Southern Teams Volunteer
In the south, Tennessee's volunteers have lived up to their name
by indicating their willingness to play for the fund. Mississippi A.
and M. also announced it would be available and others probably will follow.

The Big Ten conference still has
the subject under consideration although that powerful group already has amended its by-laws to permit
extension of the season from Nov.
21 to Nov. 28 for intra-conference games for charity. Dayton, of Ohio, is another volunteer from the mid-west. The Big Six members,
Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas, Kap-
sus State, Oklahoma and Iowa State, are known to be in favor of postseason charity games but the Conference, as a group, has as yet
taken no action.

In the Rocky Mountain Conference a charity game Dec. 5, at Denver, tentatively has been booked although the contestants have
not yet been selected.

Racoon Hunting Will Be Banned After January 15

LISBON, Oct. 16.—Deputy Game Warden L. W. Boring has been informed by I. S. Guthery, director of agriculture, that because racoon is in danger of depletion, the conservancy council has ordered that a five year closed season will be in effect for this game after Jan. 15.
The new order provides that rac-
coon can be taken only this year
from Nov. 15 to Jan. 15. Hereo-
fore, the season closed Feb. 1. During the five year period the raccoon season will extend for two months only.

Wednesday night at 10:15 and at 12:50 each Thursday, the division of conservation will sponsor a radio

WELTERS CLASH IN GOTHAM RING

Billy Townsend Battles Paul
Walker in Main Battle on Card
At Madison Square Garden

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—A welterweight duel between Billy Townsend, Vancouver welterweight and Paulie Walker, rugged Trenton, N.

J. battler tops Madison Square Garden's weekly boxing card tonight.

Townsend, hard-pressed to win
over Billy ran, Polish socker, in his eastern debut last week perhaps will find Walker a handful. The
New Jersey boy, a puncher who can take it, fights as though he likes it.

Originally Walker was to have fought Benny Leonard but Benny was banned from the garden by the
New York State Athletic commission after his unsatisfactory fight with Pal Silvers.

The semi-final of tonight's show will pit Vince Dundee, crack
Newark middleweight, against Solly Krieger of New York.

all the other vitamins, but not vitamin-D.

Now, this precious sunshine vitamin-D comes to you in Bond Bread. You can't see sunshine vitamin-D.
You can't taste this wonderful health-source any more than you can taste sunshine itself. But it's there—in every loaf of Bond Bread—and in no bread except Bond! One to two slices each meal

PLAYING WITH FIRE

BY WILLIAM McLEOD RAINE

SYNOPSIS

Lee Reynolds is the owner of a ranch, which drought has almost ruined. She leases a Mexican rancho and moves her starving herd there. She is barely settled when a revolution breaks out. Megares, a former foreman of Lee's, is his right hand man. Brennan was discharged by Lee and swore revenge. Lee hires a new hand, who is recognized by Dunc Daggett, an old ranch helper, as Jack Hadley, a millionaire oil man of California, whose father owned a mine near Lee's ranch and was murdered by outlaws. Hadley is searching for the murderer of his father. Hadley and Lee call on Megares, who is, apparently friendly to them. Megares calls at the ranch and is infatuated with Lee's guest, Mrs. Doris Silver. He comes to live at the rancho, to protect them, he says, though they are really his prisoners. Doris is rescued by her husband, Lee refuses to leave her ranchers—and Jack Hadley, whom she loves. Harold Silver promises to return with an armed plane for their rescue. Lee and Jack are sentenced by a drum court martial to be shot at sunset.

INSTALMENT 27

BRENNAN INTERRUPTS
Opening the door, Megares walked in and bowed to his prisoner.
"Tell me you will save his life," she cried.
He moved forward, smiling at her.
"Whose life, my dear lady? Let us not talk of others. Let us have this one hour for our own."
"You can't mean to kill Jack Hadley. You are trying to frighten me. Well, you have won. I am frightened. Now you will save him, will you not?"
The sad eyes beneath the long silken lashes pleaded with him to be pitiful.
"But I cannot save him. He was convicted by court martial. It is out of my hands. I must not interfere. All my concern is with you, Nina. I am grieved that you must so soon pass out of the sunshine."
"Let me die tonight—with him—if he must die. I beg that of you with all my heart."
He was taken aback. He had come prepared to bargain with her for her life, to grant it at a price. And she preferred to die with her lover.

"You are a trifle abrupt my friend."

This was annoying, since what he had to offer was something she did not value.
"You do not want to live?" he said.
"I'm not afraid for myself. You do not mean to kill me. Before those other men would find me guilty you had to promise to pardon me. Anyone could see that. But if you must have a life, take mine and spare Jack Hadley."
"So you are quite sure I mean to pardon you. Don't be so certain. I may, if you are reasonable. You shall bargain for your life, my dear."
"For his," she substituted.
"For your own. Look at the picture. On one side swift death—oblivion; on the other love and sunshine, pleasant days and ecstatic nights, all the good years ahead. What will you pay to make the latter come true?"
"It could come true only if Jack was alive. I'll give you everything I have in the world to let him go. My ranch—all my cattle—what money I have."
"Not feasible. I am wanted in your United States just as I am here. Your government would not permit me to enjoy these good things. Have you nothing else to offer—for your own life, not for his?"
"Nothing."
Irritation flashed from him.
"Wake up, you fool. I give the word and you will walk out to death. Think. Worms will eat your body. I can save you—I alone."
"You can save me for long years of sorrow and grief. That is all."
He put an arm around her and dragged her slender body close to his. His hot black eyes blazed into her amber ones and lit no answering fire there. She made no resistance. She was inert and lifeless, unmoved by his anger and his passion.
"You Puritan Yankees!" he cried. "None of you know what love is. It is hot lava in the blood. It is desire storming through the veins. It is passion crying for its own. But I will teach you. I. Manuel Megares, will change that water in your arteries to red and rushing fire. From me you will learn how a Spaniard loves."
"I will learn only how to hate you as a cruel savage animal."
"We shall see. But whether you love or hate, you shall be mine. You and that blundering fool Hadley came between me and the woman I had chosen. I swore then, you should take her place. If I have to hide in the hills you shall go with me. From one gorge to another I will drag you as we are being hunted."
Into her mind a dark thought came. He had spoken of a bargain. Since she was lost anyhow why not get something out of the wreck? She offered a compromise, hating herself and him.
"I will go with you. I will pay the debt I owe. But you will give me something in exchange? You will spare my friend and let him go? If I am to . . . to be yours . . . you must be generous. You must give me this one thing I ask."
All the young life had been stricken out of her. The big eyes had lost their luster. The cheeks were pale and cold. The body in his arms was flaccid. She looked a bride fit for death. But he knew that youth is resilient. His hour would come, he told himself.
His wily brain busied itself planning deception. He could pretend to give way, could promise her Hadley's life, and even let her see the man starting for the line. Then he could have him seized and secretly killed. Why not? She would not learn for weeks how he had fooled her. By that time it would not matter.
He laughed. "You are persistent. My dear Very well. You win. The Yankee shall live, and you shall go with me—willingly—and he shall be nothing to you and I shall be everything."
"Yes," she answered, in a small dead voice.
He kissed her eyelids and her lips ravenously, and she stood there in his arms, a lax dead thing, and wondered how life could go on in the days to come when she would be paying forfeit.
The door opened abruptly and Brennan stood at the entrance to the room glowering at them.
The arms of the Mexican fell away from the girl. His lids narrowed, but his words were ironically suave.
"You are a trifle abrupt, my friend, interrupting our love-making. You will wish, perhaps, to apologize and retire."
The eyes of each man were fastened on those of the other. Not once did either relax for an instant the rigor of his steady regard. For both knew, by that sixth sense which warns men who have faced danger often, that the quarrel between them was about to come to tragic issue. The harsh imperious temper of the big man had crashed the barriers of caution at last. He had made one stipulation with his recklessness and only one. Just outside the patio a fast horse stood saddled, tied to a post by a slip knot. That much chance he had given himself.
"No. I know you, fellow. You've always been a double-crossing wolf. What story have you been stringing her with now?"
"He's going to save Jack," Lee cried. "We've made a bargain. He's going to free him and let him go home."
"That's a lie. He's not going to do anything of the sort."
"Take care," Megares warned.
The Mexican was watching him intently, every nerve wary, every muscle alert. It would be soon now, he was thinking.
"I've watched your smoke, you crook. If you're pretending to let Hadley go, you're aiming to have him bushwhacked. Haven't I known you twenty years? The girl's to pay the price while you fool her. That's the way of it, eh? Well, you don't get away with it."
"You threaten me?"
"I'm telling you. She's to give you her good clean body in exchange for your damned lies? No. I'll send you to hell first."
The brown fingers of the Mexican swept up to the revolver butt above the holster. Even then, in that fraction of a second before the guns blazed, Brennan knew he had let his anger trick him. Lee was standing back of Megares almost in the line of fire. The knowledge of this disturbed the aim of the big man.
While the revolvers roared Lee crowded close to the wall. She saw stabbing spurts of flame, two distorted faces wreathed in smoke, bodies tensed and crouched about like those of wild beasts about to spring. She heard an oath, a gasp, the crash of a table as it went over from the impact of a staggering weight.
Ranase was on the floor, trying desperately to raise his weapon, and Megares was flinging bullets into the prone figure.
Lee screamed out a protest and ran forward. She threw herself beside the body of her former employee. He was dead before she could even lift the head.
She looked up into the twisted face looking down with such fiendish hate. At sight of it she shuddered.
Already men were pouring into the room.
"He threatened me and attacked me," Megares explained. "I call this woman to witness. Look at his gun. It has been fired two or three times. The man was a traitor. He deserved death."
"Are you wounded?" a soldier asked.
"No. I was too quick for him." The killer was recovering his surface aplomb. The assassin drew and fired before I got my revolver out. Take out the traitor's body and bury it," Megares ordered.
Lee sank into a chair and covered her face with her hands.
The bandit chief looked down at her for a moment, smiled cruelly, then turned and walked from the room. He was going to be busy for a short time explaining what had occurred to his subordinate officers. It was just as well the official report of Brennan's death should bear the color he wished.

Sets Loop Mark

Tex Rankin (above), of Portland, Ore., completed 131 outside loops at the All-Southern Aircraft Pageant held at Charlotte, N. C., to break the world's record of 124 outside loops made by Roy Hunt of Oklahoma City, Okla. The outside loop is one of the most difficult feats in aviation and is not to be confused with the inside loop, in which the centrifugal force holds the flier in the plane.

FIGURES SHOW FEDERAL DEBT

$502,106,600 In Red, Gov- ernment Statistics Reveal

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16. — Cold figures emphasized the difficult financial position of the government today, the deficit passing the half billion dollar mark.

For the first three and a half months of the fiscal year, which began July 1, the treasury books show the government to be $502,106,600 in the red.

Ponder Situation

Even as this was revealed, fiscal experts of the department were pondering over how to adjust the situation—whether taxes should be increased. President Hoover has said the study will continue some time, with no decision likely before congress returns to work in December.

The deficit is $485,000,000 more than it was for the same period of the previous fiscal year. At the close of business October 13, the government had collected from all sources $629,768,231 and had spent $1,131,874,831.

The receipts were $250,000,000 less than collected in the same period of last year, and the expenditures $200,000,000 more than spent in the first two and one-half months of the 1931 year.

The seriousness of the government's financial position became apparent early this year when income taxes dwindled away at an alarming rate, and the government finished the fiscal year on June 30, with a deficit of $903,000,000.

Income Taxes Drop

The chief cause of that deficit was a decrease of $550,000,000 in income tax collections. In the two and one-half months of the present year income tax receipts were $241,000,000 less than collected in the same period of last year, when they amounted to $561,000,000. Total internal revenue collections for the present year amounted to $481,717,805 as compared to $738,621,055 last year.

Since the government receipts have been dropping away its expenditures have been met by borrowing money through issuance of treasury bills, certificates of indebtedness and bonds.

THE KITCHEN LIBRARY

"Mother, how do you take ink spots out of a colored tablecloth and not ruin the color?" "Mother, I've got to make crullers for Bill—and they've got to be good. What'll I do?" Brides of an earlier day leaned heavily on mother for advice in the first months of housekeeping. Some consulted her for crullers and never felt sure they were doing the right thing until mother approved. Which may have accounted for some of the traditional little hostilities to the in-laws cherished by the other side of the house. Nowadays, however, this is a disappearing custom. Today's mother-in-law is just as modern as today's bride. Likely as not, she is delighted at her release from housekeeping when the children grow up and go off, and the last thing she wants is cookery conversation. Indeed, she may be in business or interested in public affairs more than personal housekeeping. At any rate, the up-to-date housekeeper doesn't look for help to her friends and relations. She can get plenty of authoritative advice from specialists, and she can keep it within arm's reach so that she can have it when she wants it without delay.

What's In It?

In the modern kitchen, be it ever so small, there is always room for a three-piece kitchen library. It may be tucked in a kitchen cabinet, in a deep, drawer, or, better still, on a small shelf near the kitchen table or stove. A general cookery book is the obvious essential, and there are a number of excellent ones available. Inexperienced housekeepers may be tempted to begin with the elaborate dishes, in a valiant effort to achieve astonishing results. But it's safer to begin at the beginning, and not disdain the elementary textbooks that tell one exactly how to boil an egg or prepare a good cup of coffee, or cook a chop. The cook who won't bother to learn the simple things will never do them properly, and there are many experienced housekeepers who bowl you over with spectacular puddings and gaudy salads, and yet do not, by any chance, ever serve a steak that is tender, or fragrant coffee. One the other hand, the cook who develops expertise in the preparation of simple foods has two good assets. She has a confidence in her ability to serve well those with simple tastes. But also the grounding in the principles of simple cookery will be a firm foundation for experiments with more complicated dishes. Next to the good elementary cookbook stands the book of household management—expert information in purchasing in laundry work, budgeting, cleaning. This may mean more than a single volume, and those sufficiently interested can collect a great deal of authoritative information from free government bulletins issued by the

Don't Go to Extremes To End Constipation

When had breath, or a coated tongue, biliousness or headaches warn of constipation, don't take violent purgatives. There's no use when a candy Cascaret will stop the trouble in a jiffy; will cleanse your system pleasantly, and completely.

The relief you get so promptly from Cascarets is lasting. Cascarets are made from cascara, a substance which medical authorities agree actually strengthens the bowel muscles.

So Cascarets are a blessing to old folks with weakened bowels; to children; to anyone in need of establishing regular bowel habits. Ten cents a box—all drug stores. Adv

Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture, in Washington. Last, but just as important as the others, is the housekeeper's individual collection—her card index. This contains information she has picked up and wishes to keep: Recipes given in periodicals or by friends; things she would like to try or has tried and found good; little suggestions in the matters of interior decoration; home repairs; names of shops or special places where desired objects may be obtained some day or other. These take up little space if recorded on cards and neatly filed, and become very useful at the right moment. You may not need the name of that vacuum cleaner repairer today, but if written on a card and kept, the bit of information may save time and money before long.

Substance In Soups

"Soup is wholesome," is one of those dietetic generalities that is now, fortunately, discredited. How much infant suffering could have been avoided if parents of a generation or so ago didn't insist on pouring "this good soup" down reluctant and protesting throats!

Ingredients Tell the Story Soup may be nourishing, depending on its ingredients. But all the clear soups are in the nature of appetizers, hardly sources of nourishment. And in many cases, soup is harmful, not wholesome. If appetite is low, a thin soup will fill but not nourish, and persons with gastric disturbances are frequently advised against eating any kind of soup.

On the other hand, many soups with a milk or protein basis are so nutritious that they are in themselves a complete light meal. A soup luncheon on a cold day disposes of that midday meal agreeably, wholesomely and easily for the cook. Add 1 quart of milk to half that quantity of any vegetable puree—carrot, corn, celery, potato, squash, tomato—and it becomes a nourishing midday meal for two. Here is another type of substantial soup which appeals to children:

Nut Soup (for 3)

1 cupful boiled mashed chestnut puree
1 quart milk
1 quart milk
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour
1 teaspoon salt

Throw the chestnuts into boiling water and leave until skin can be slipped off. Place in a saucepan of boiling water, add a slice of onion, a celery stalk and parsley and simmer 30 or 40 minutes, until tender. Drain, force through ricer. Melt butter in saucepan, add flour, chestnuts and hot milk and stir until thick and smooth. Peanut butter may be used instead of mashed chestnuts, and in many cases is preferred. But the nut and milk combination make of this soup a very substantial dish.
